REGULATORY

Joelson's regulatory team has considerable experience advising on regulatory law, including health and safety legislation, product safety, and food safety guidelines.

These are areas that businesses can ill afford to ignore. Revised sentencing guidelines have significantly increased fine levels (based on turnover) for those firms which fail to meet their obligations. The department is able to provide guidance to businesses of all sizes, from start-ups to multi-national operators.

We recognise that every client has different requirements and ensure that we work to tailor our service to meet the specific needs of each business when guiding them through the legislative red tape that affects the whole of the leisure industry.

Our Services

Regulatory law is a rapidly-changing and complicated field and keeping up-to-date with the various requirements can pose a challenge for any business. We have forged strong relationships with the various industry regulators and are well placed to assist you with the matters that you need to be aware of.

Our areas of expertise include:

- Defending prosecutions
- Sentencing advice
- Advising on good practice
- Food standards and hygiene requirements
- Support in attending an interview under caution (PACE)
- Improvement and prohibition notices

Our department has experienced advocates, with Higher Rights of Audience which allow us to represent clients in the Crown Court.
